

FARMER'S HOTEL

2014 - 4000 COLERAIN AVENUE - NORTHSIDE

The former Farmer's Hotel is Northside's oldest commercial building, and only remaining former hotel along Colerain that once catered to farmers as they drove livestock into the City during the Porkopolis days. Following City Historic Landmark designation, this structure was saved from demolition and stabilized for future redevelopment in 2014.

HISTORIC STABILIZATION PROJECT

Circa-1859 former hotel, restaurant, and tavern

$73,786 historic stabilization

Hamilton County Landbank
City of Cincinnati

IMPACT TO DATE

Maintained this historic link to Cincinnati's Porkopolis days

HISTORICAL HIGHLIGHT

Link to Historic Porkopolis

When the Farmer's Hotel opened in 1859, it was one of a number of hotels serving the farmers driving their livestock into the thriving City of Cincinnati from points north. Over the years, those other hotels have shuttered their doors and given way to the wrecking ball, leaving 4000 Colerain as the last Northside link to Cincinnati's meatpacking heyday.

The oldest commercial building in Northside, and one of the few remaining that was built when the community was known as Cumminsville, the hotel featured a saloon, dining room, and ballroom on the third floor with lodgings on the lower two floors. The lot the structure stands on retains its open space, previously used to pen livestock.

3 EAST FOURTH STREET
CINCINNATI, OHIO 45202
513.621.3000

Greater Cincinnati
REDEVELOPMENT AUTHORITY